

HackIDC Mentorship Summary

What is the mentorship program?

For the first time, HackIDC is operating a special mentorship program, designed especially for “first timer” programmers and those who want to participate in the hackathon, but need to further develop their developing skills.

What does it include?

The program will include three special sessions with top developers from hi-tech companies that will teach participants about all the relevant technologies needed to succeed in hackathons. This includes special tips and “hacks” from their own personal experience.

Part of the sessions will be workshops, including “hands-on” practice to better prepare participants to be productive in the hackathon.

In addition to all this, there will be mentors onsite during the hackathon to provide additional assistance just for our “beginner” hackers.

When and Where?

All the sessions will take part in IDC Herzliya Campus, during the weeks before the hackathon (March-April).

Who can and should register?

This program is exclusive for IDC Herzliya students that don't have a lot of previous programming experience. Participants are required to be computer science students and have done at least one programming course within their studies.
